40 CANDIDATES ON OREGON'S FIELD

University of Oregon, Eugene, Sept. 18.—Forty football men, almost a record number for the middle of the season, appeared on Kincaid field yesterday afternoon, two days before the opening of college. Trainer Hayward and the coaches are enthusiastic, first over the larger number of candidates but more so over the splendid quality of football material already on hand to fill the vacant places of the graduates. The men too, feel the spirit of the situation and where a few days ago the outlook seemed dubious, with the three teeth missing in the famous bulldog line, things have brightened up very appreciably. The new bunch is such that it will not only give hopes for this year but fill a team that will continue development during the coming years.

The open places, for which almost two score are already fighting, are the two ends, center, quarterback and one half. For the quarter position, Coach Pinkham has found such men as Cornell, the brilliant Portland lad who astonished the interscholastic followers with his wonderful speed and dexterity; Harold Purdy, a high-school "phenom" of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; and Ross, the Wenatchee, Wash. pivot.

Cook, May Land Half.
Sam Cook of Coeur d'Alene has a good chance at the vacant half, while the empty center will be sought for by such men from last year's squad as Grout or Fenton. Hall and Bailey will hold their old positions at tackle and beside them as guards will be Farris and Grout. In the back field will be Walker and Heuser. With the very large number of competing candidates, it is rather too early to be building probable teams. Ben Chandler and Stannard are possible men to fill the ends though either of these men is capable of several other places. Among the other old men who have not yet made the first squad are Broughton and Barzee, both Portland men. Bradshaw may be able to return to his end place but there is doubt.

Three graduate coaches, "Bill" Main, Gordon Moore and "Chuck" Taylor, a triumvirate of Oregon's greatest football heroes, are all on hand and assisting Head Coach Pinkham, the famous Oregon tackle.

Orpheum.

An extra good program for Tuesday's change. Four full reels of the best American pictures.

1. Holding the Fort. Edison. Never before have four walls been called upon to stand such a pressure of comedy. It takes place in room No. 23, accidentally assigned to a newly married man and a maternal maiden lady who is a delegate and a speaker at a convention.

2. Kentucky Girl. Kalem. Bell Mae Marsh and Bob Hopkins (Carlyle Blackwell) believe their father's horse, the famous Kentucky girl, will be sure to win in the coming race. The only contestant they fear is Jim Penn, owned by their neighbor, Rollins, a banker.

On the verge of bankruptcy, Hopkins appeals to Rollins for help. The banker consents only on one condition that he will give him Belle in marriage. This offer is spurned. "Shorty," a successful jockey, promises to ride Kentucky Girl for the colonel. The banker, fearing defeat, tries to poison the horse, but through Shorty's plans are frustrated and shorty rides Kentucky Girl to victory.

3. The Inner Circle. Biograph. An unusually interesting picture, featuring Miss Mary Pickford. A lonely widow living in the Italian quarter of the city, whose only solace is his little child, is reluctantly a member of a secret society. They ask a wealthy member for $500 to cover expenses of the society. They are refused. They decide upon his annihilation electing the widower to do the deed. In the meantime his little child had been hurt in an automobile accident and carried into the doomed house just as the father places and lights the bomb beneath it.

4. A Messenger to Kearney. Selig. A story of early California just about the time the gringos came. The plot deals with a love episode in which a frontiersman, Clay, rescues a seniorita, Isabella Marcello, from a forced marriage to a Mexican, her father's choice. Phyllis Gordon plays the girl and A. E. Gracia the Mexican.

The Pastime.

The home of good pictures. Unusually interesting program for Tuesday's change.

"The Prison Ship." Kalem.—A gripping drama of the American revolution. The first scene opens in a colonial manor house, the home of the heroine. The British authorities held American prisoners of war in an old bulk anchored in New York harbor. This story works up to a thrilling escape from this ship. The heroine gets word to her lover in the ship and brings a boat under his windows into which he lowers himself on knotted bedding. They are pursued by British soldiers almost to the American camp where the red coats fall into an ambush and are cut to pieces by a well-aimed volley. The acting is fine. The escape is perfectly conducted and the climax where the blue coats volley into the pursuers is a fine thrill.

"Cupid's Stolen Arrows." American Pathé. Cupid, the playful elf has been caught napping and his arrows stolen by an evil spirit. With the change in ownership many amusing situations arise, for young and old succumb to the baleful influence of the demon until cupid awakens and succeeds in righting the mischief which has been wrought.

"The Wayfarer." Selig. This is a story exemplifying the strength of the weak. In the fast passing rough wild days of our western frontier life the women folks of a ranch often underwent the most harrowing experiences, while adding in the capture of some border desperado.

"Spring Log Driving Maine." Edison. This is a perfect picture in every respect with an educational and entertaining value, abounding in picturesque scenes, some of them not a little exciting.

Cosy.

Wednesday and Thursday, Florence Lawrence and Owen Moore in a strong dramatic story.

"The Chance Shot." Victor. Rather than let her husband know that her father had been hanged for murder, the young wife paid a former acquaintance hush money to keep the matter secret. Meeting him one day she hid him in a shed when she saw her husband and a friend returning from a hunting trip. To settle a question of marksmanship the two men fired at a target on the shed door. Flo on her way home heard the shots and hurried back. On opening the door they found fate had taken a hand, for the blackmailer had been killed by a stray shot.

"How He Made Good." Bison. A fine western story, with lots of fast riding, and many beautiful scenes. The plot is clearly and convincingly set forth, and the characters seem very human and life-like.

"The Maid of the Rocks." Champion. Laid in a seacoast village, the story deals with the love of a coast guard and a smuggler for a fisher-maid. She loves the smuggler who promises to quit the business for her. But he decides to make one last trip; the smugglers are surprised by the coast guards and in the battle the girl's lover wounds his rival and is taken prisoner. The story ends in a dramatic and very pleasing way.

"His First and Last Appearance." Powers. An uproarious comedy of farmer life, which deals with a country boy's ambition to become an actor, and how fate through the medium of a barn-storming road show gave him a chance. His appearance nearly caused a riot. One big laugh throughout.

drama, "In Old Tennessee." A lively story of adventure and love amid the moonshiners.

The Goddess of Liberty.

Coming to the Oregon theater September 26, is Joseph E. Howard, the well known composer, actor and singer, in the big musical comedy, The Goddess of Liberty, with a company of 40 people. The play has been here before and is highly recommended by the management. Mr. Howard has added all new music to the show and is supported by Miss Mabel McCane. By the way, Miss McCane is the little lady who succeeded Abarbonelli in Madam Sherry, and is given the credit of playing the part in Madam Sherry in her style and manner to a much better advantage than Miss Abarbonelli, in all the Boston papers last season. She has been playing with Mr. Howard in vaudeville since October, and the criticism by the critics have been more than great for her.

HANDSOME BELT AMONG PRIZES

To the man who establishes the best claim to the title of champion all-around cowboy during the annual Round-up here next week will be awarded a handsome, gold mounted trophy belt donated by Richard K. Fox, publisher of the Police Gazette, and made by Brock & Co., Los Angeles jewelers. The belt has already been received and may well be coveted by any one of the army of cowboys which will be here for the Round-up contests.

The award will be based on the individual records of the competitors. To the first, second and third place winners in the various events, points will be credited, the number of points to be determined by the nature of the event. For those events which put a premium upon the skill of the cowboy rather than upon the fleetness and other qualities of his mount, the greatest number of points will be awarded.

The following is the way the points will be awarded in the various events:

1st, 2nd, 3d.
Rucking	25 15 5
Bull-dogging	25 15 5
Toping	25 15 5
